Property Casualty Insurance Information System

Risk Management and Tort Defense is undertaking a rewrite of their Property/Casualty Insurance Information System (PCIIS) used by agencies to enter new assets, update existing assets, or review historical insurance information. PCIIS was originally developed in 2001 to assist state agencies in reporting their insurable assets in accordance with §2-9-201, MCA.

In 2005, Department of Administration's, State Information Technology Service Division (SITSD), took over technical maintenance, upgrades, and enhancements to the system. A little over a year ago RMTD and SITSD actively began working together to rewrite the application in newer technology with an improved user interface and migration of the existing asset data. The original PCIIS system was a web based solution which provided RMTD a great way to collect agencies' data. However, IT has advanced in the years since it had been written and the original system's technology became out of date. This made it difficult to provide updates and enhancements to the system.

The new and improved version of PCIIS employs a modern java-based user interface, simpler navigational tools, and improved search capabilities. World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) is the main driver of international standards for the World Wide Web. The organization develops protocols and guidelines that ensure long term growth on the web, these become web standards. The Web Accessibility Initiative (WAI) of World Wide Web Consortium develops and publishes strategies, guidelines, and resources to make web applications accessible to people with disabilities. The new PCIIS adheres to these standards and guidelines.
